

A promotional image for a theater show. Two men are shown from the waist up, wearing overalls over black t-shirts. The man on the left has glasses and is wearing blue overalls; the man on the right is bald and wearing white overalls. Both are smiling broadly and have their arms raised in a dramatic, expressive pose. The background is solid black, and the scene is lit with a warm, golden light. The title 'ELECTRICITY IN THE BLOOD' is centered in white, sans-serif font. Below it, the text 'a theater show from metroccolis' is also centered in a smaller white font.

ELECTRICITY
IN THE BLOOD

a theater show from metroccolis

What can come into being if two ordinary electricians are bound to cross a theater stage? In this case you will see a sparkling kaleidoscope full of touching and suspenseful moments, dance explosions and non-verbal energy - altogether evolving from: the magic of mime

Electricity in the Blood is a matchless 90-minutes-show for theater, festival and gala stages blending dance, robot and mime on a continuous tightrope walk between charming slapstick and melancholic poetry, between silent acting and thrilling choreographies. Moreover, by the minimal need of technical conditions, it is a sheer acknowledgement for the power of present-day mime by metroccolis

The SZ newspaper reports:

“Electrified for 90 minutes”

“These guys are full of energy and know how to transmit it”

“Already the first dance act caused an uproar of applause and jubilation”

“The creative implementation and body language combined with music are simply brilliant”

“The audience - spellbound”

“Rocco and Stefan are pros at carrying away the people and absorbing them into the show from one minute to the other. They are virtually toying with their audience” duration of the play: 90 minutes

2 actors and 1 technician

fees* on request

discount for bookings

from 2 resp. 5 shows up

2 shows per day realizable technical demands:

stage with 2 entrances

plain white stage light sound system with CD-player *plus taxes + travel costs and accommodation for 3 people